Publicly-Accessible Volunteer Driver Programs

Volunteer driver programs (VDPs) are a key piece to any community transportation puzzle, helping those without a means of transportation, particularly seniors and individuals with disabilities, reach important appointments. Older adults may not have family members, caregivers, friends, or neighbors who are able to transport them. And although formal transportation options may be available, it may be difficult or impossible for older adults to access them. The physical and cognitive

Volunteer Driver Programs

How has the pandemic affected those that you typically serve?

It is more difficult for riders to get to where they need to go

Many riders' appointments have been converted to telehealth, but a number have had to postpone eye appointments and medical elective surgeries

Clients are afraid to go to the hospital and other appointments, many have cancelled discretionary trips

Feelings of isolation among riders, increased anxiety, loneliness

For some, their families have become more involved and are providing rides for them. For some, they appear not to be too concerned. For others who are already anxious, this is made them more so.

They have fewer medical appointments. Otherwise we do not know.

It is a tremendous burden on many. We are trying to coordinate help whenever possible

They are requesting fewer rides. Either because of the fear of exposure, they have found alternative ride options, or because of increased tele-health visits.

Pandemic Heroes: Volunteer Driver Programs

Are you concerned that your ridership will remain low when given the “go-ahead” to return to service, due to the concern riders have for their health, safety, or other reasons? Please explain.

Ridership will remain low because of a shortage of drivers

Expecting that some clients still won't travel and will be too nervous to go out

It will be a long time before drivers and riders feel safe

Eventually it will return to normal

Expect need for rides will explode since people have been putting off critical medical appointments

Hoping that ridership will remain the same

Clients are already filling my books with requests for Covid postponed appointments. I think we will be at capacity soon given that clients are ready to return to in person medical appointments, but prior drivers have not returned in matching numbers to accommodate the rides requested. Our ridership will have to be capped if not enough drivers return provide the rides.

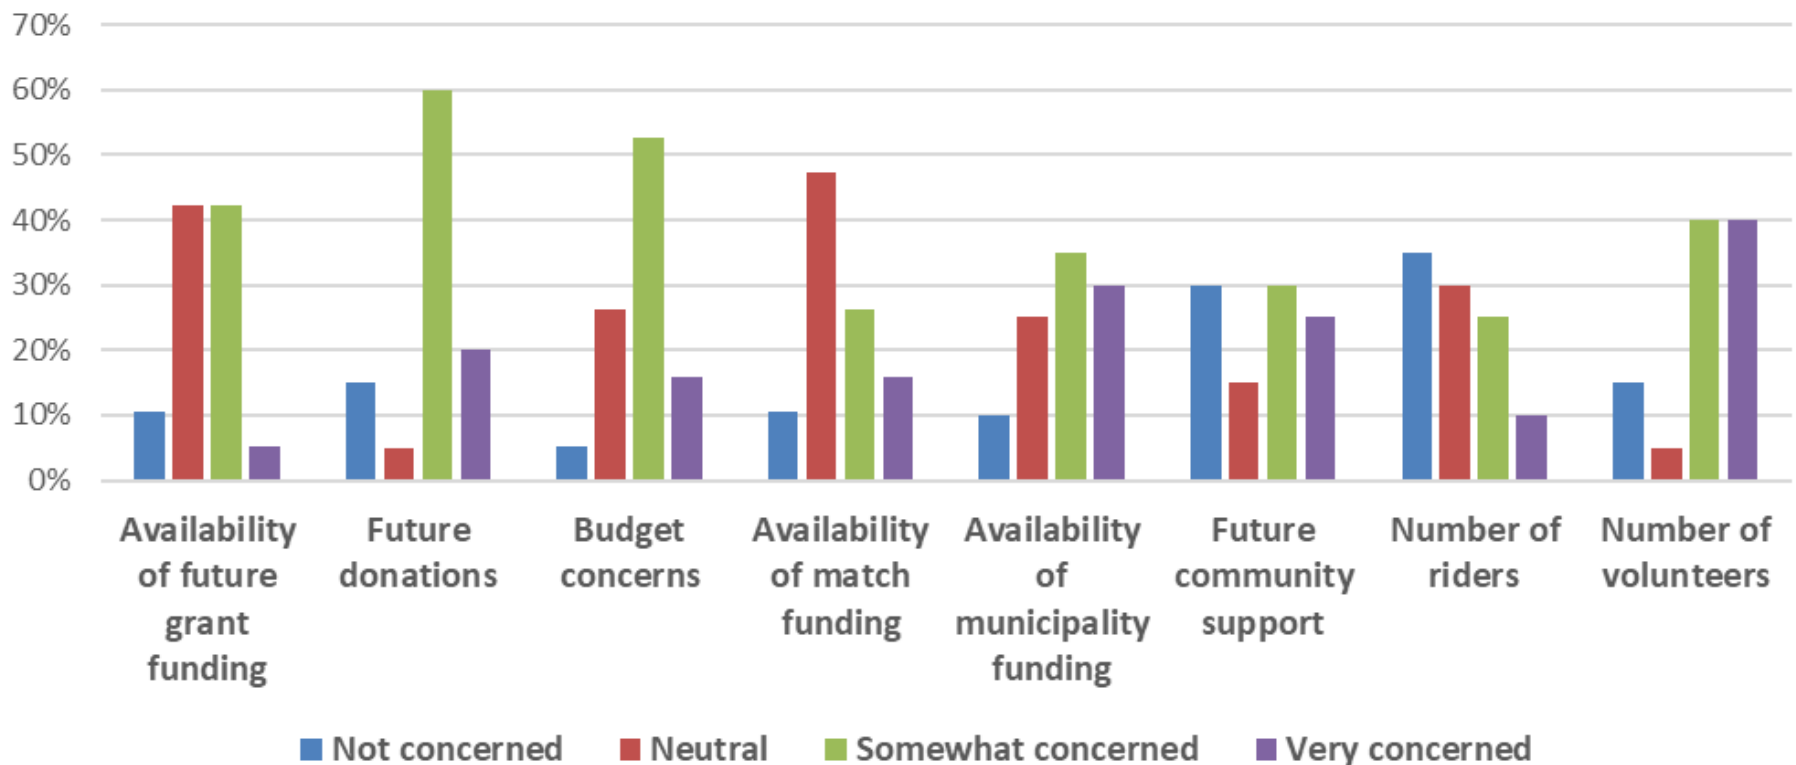

The issue will not be with clients but with drivers willing to drive

Safety concerns, and because riders may have found alternative ride solutions with which they are now comfortable.

As long as everyone abides by the guidelines things should return to normal

Based on the evolving situation of COVID19, please rate your concern on the following issues:

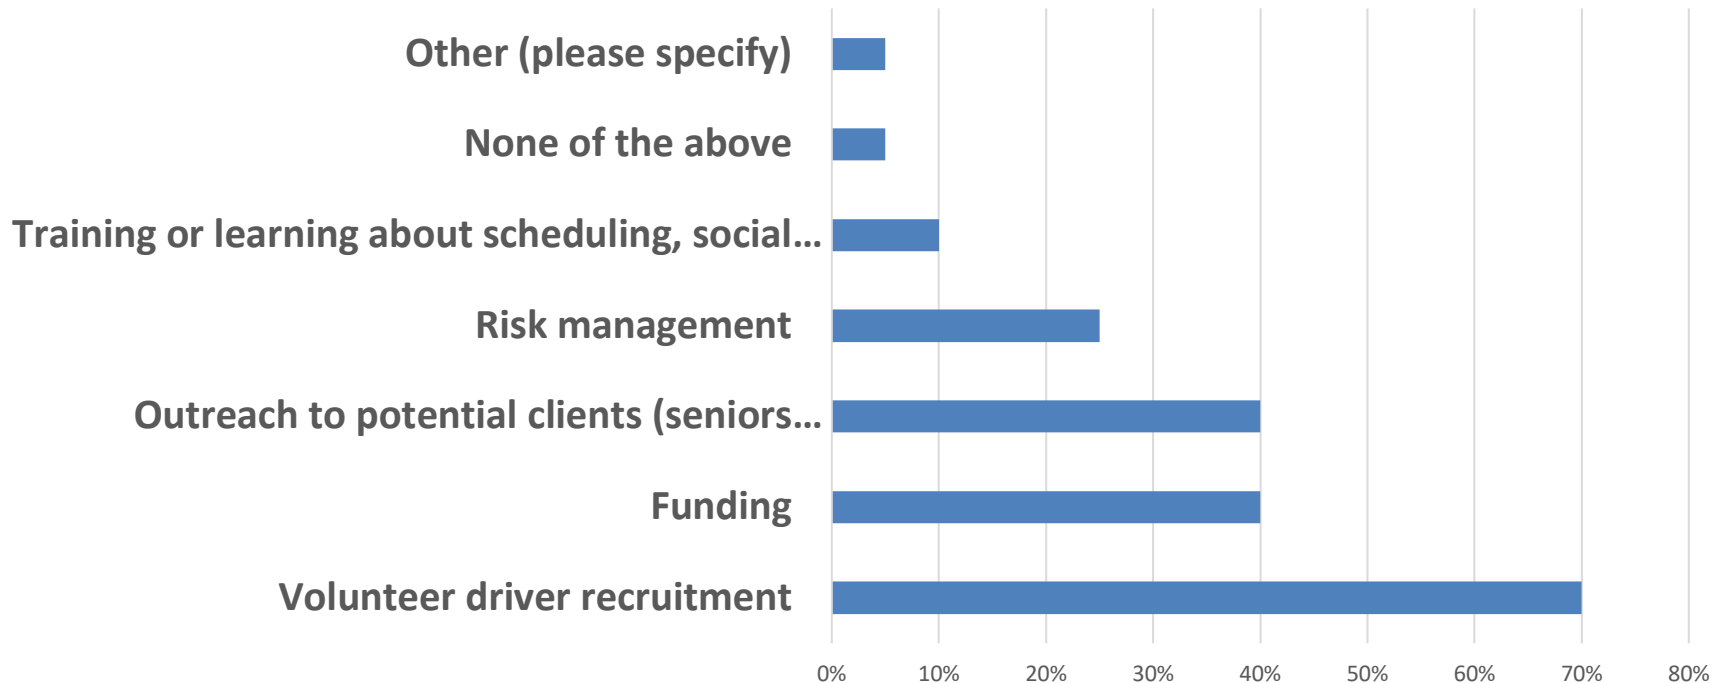

Pandemic Heroes: Volunteer Driver Programs

Given the reliance on online connections, do you have needs for any of the following technological options?

Pandemic Heroes: Volunteer Driver Programs

Does your volunteer driver program need assistance with any of the following? (check all that apply)

Pandemic Heroes: Volunteer Driver Programs

Approximately 45 New Hampshire communities have no access to volunteer driver services. Post pandemic, is there a set of circumstances under which your organization would consider expanding your service area to incorporate neighboring communities that may have little or no access to transit or volunteer driver services? Please explain.

Yes: “If we could get drivers and funding

No: “Funding is a problem, Recruiting volunteers is a problem.

Creating Partnerships is Key

Transportation Planners, Transit Agencies, State Coordinating Councils, and others are interested in partnering with Volunteer Driver Program Services. These entities may be able to help volunteer driver programs by providing technical assistance to develop increased services and capacity. Would you like more information on these various agencies?
